

Educational Psychology (1972-1980)

The Educational Psychology program was a joint venture with the educational psychologists housed in the College of Human Resources and Education. Although only one faculty line in the Department of Psychology was allocated to this area of emphasis, several graduate students were recruited and completed dissertations in this area. The joint program was discontinued in 1980, but continues to operate in the College of Human Resources and Education.

a = moved to Developmental Psychology, but emphasis was on Teaching of Psychology until retirement in 1995
